Benedictine prior, Walcher of Malvern, refers to the lunar eclipse of 30 Oct 1091 that he happened to observe in Italy.
On returning to England he discovered that several hours appeared to have separated the time of the eclipse in Italy and in England. Puzzled by this, he was careful later to record the time as precisely as he could when, unexpectedly, on 18 Oct 1092 the moon underwent another eclipse

"Hence according to this rule which I have explained earlier, the lunar cycle began on 3 Oct at 19.30 hours.
